"Mom was at the point where she couldn't wash her own hands. I would get so frustrated that I'd just wash them for her. A friend told us about Home Instead Senior Care so we enlisted the help of a professional CAREGiver, Bea, and I was amazed at what I saw. Bea would stand at the sink with Mom and talk her through each step. First, she would tap on the faucet until Mom turned it on; then she would tap on the soap until Mom picked the soap up. Bea would imitate washing her hands and Mom would follow Bea's instructions. It was amazing to me the amount of patience Bea had with Mom, but the more amazing thing was the look of accomplishment on Mom's face when she had finished washing her hands by herself."

SENIOR CARE®

Nearly six million individuals in the United States and Canada have Alzheimer's disease and related dementias – a number that is expected to reach nearly 20 million in the next five decades. These are not just statistics; they represent millions of families with a loved one who requires special care.

“Dad got very lonely and upset after dinner every evening. I stayed with him all day but would need to get home to my own family at night. He was at the point of becoming anxious and fearful of being alone. That's when we decided to make Bill, a professional CAREGiver, a part of Dad's life. Bill stays with Dad until he falls asleep. He also sits with him and keeps his mind busy with puzzles or looking at family photos before bed. I saw Dad's stress level decrease each day when I would get ready to leave because he knew Bill was on his way to see him.”

“Shortly after my father was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease, my brother and I began taking turns caring for him. We watched the disease take my dad away one day at a time, and he rarely recognized us when we came to help. We were not prepared for the emotional and physical demands that this responsibility placed on us - it was overwhelming. So we reached out and found someone we could trust to help us take care of him. That's when Phyllis entered the picture. Phyllis is a professional CAREGiver who gives us the break we need during the busy workweek. She fills in when we can't be there and Dad enjoys her company. We are very grateful!”
